3. The resume-bullet formula

[Action verb] + [what you did] + [measurable result].

Weak: "Responsible for social media." Strong: "Grew social following 7x in 6 months." Always try to attach a number — %, ₹, count, or time saved.

4. LinkedIn headline & About formulas

Headline: [Role] | [key skill] + [key skill] | [who you help / result]

Frontend Developer | React & TypeScript | I build fast, accessible web apps

About (first line matters most): Start with what you do and who you help, then one proof point, then a call to action ("Open to [role] roles — feel free to reach out").

5. Email templates

Application email

Subject: Application — [Role] ([Your name])

Hi [name], I'm applying for the [role] role. I've attached my resume. In short: [one-line pitch with a number]. I'd love the chance to talk. Thank you!

Follow-up (after 5–7 days of silence)

Hi [name], just following up on my application for [role] sent on [date]. I'm still very interested and happy to share more. Thank you for your time!

Thank-you (within 24h of an interview)

Hi [name], thank you for the conversation today. I enjoyed learning about [something specific discussed] and I'm even more excited about the role. Happy to answer anything else. Thanks again!

6. Five interview questions & how to answer

- "Tell me about yourself." Present → past → future: what you do now, one relevant past win, why this role next. 60 seconds max.

- "Why do you want this job?" Name something specific about the company + how the role fits your path. Never "I need a job".
- "What's your biggest weakness?" A real one + what you're doing about it. Avoid fake humblebrags.
- "Tell me about a challenge." Use STAR: Situation, Task, Action, Result. End on the result with a number.
- "Do you have questions for us?" Always yes. Ask about the team, success in the first 90 days, or what they're working on next.
